Dr. Benjamin G. Swartout, is a fellowship trained sub-specialist in Facial Plastic surgery. He is passionate about providing high quality care to his patients and creating natural un-operated appearing results.

Dr. Swartout is a California native who attended college at Harvard, and went on to medical school at Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York. He then did his internship in general surgery at New York University, followed by a specialty residency in Otolaryngology – Head & Neck surgery at New York University.

Following his specialty training, he completed a fellowship in Facial Plastic & Reconstructive Surgery at the University of Illinois at Chicago where he worked with Dr. Dean Toriumi. The focus of this training was on revision rhinoplasty.

Dr. Swartout has published numerous articles and book chapters focusing on aesthetic facial surgery, specifically rhinoplasty and rhinoplasty in the Asian patient.

His special interests include the development of rhinoplasty techniques to create long lasting, favorable nasal contour and function.
